

Boston December, 1836

My Dear Lebra

Wednesday morning, Caroline went home from Boston Hingham. In the evening Mr. Hildreth called and spent the whole evening here, and Maria and Henry came up, and Henry I don't think treats him well at all, Thursday. Aunt Mary went over to Cambridge to day and is going to stay till the middle of next week, and Anne went over with her to dine, as Mr. Longfellow is going to dine there. Angelina Thimbleton came here and said that she and Melina are coming here this evening, they came, and Melina seemed very happy. They are going to have no part at the wedding, except their own relations. I have been sick, and am not well yet, so I have not been able to keep a regular journal so I shall write as much as I can think of. I send the Bussle on abolition.
I was not able to get your comb so Caroline has got it. I hope you will like it. Last Sunday Anne and Marianne and Lucretia went down to Salem street to church and they heard a most delightful sermon from Mr. Town an agent of the American Society he preached on the ^{Abuse} ~~Abuse~~ of the Sabbath, and he prayed out in the most open manner for the slaves. in short they were delighted with him even Lucretia was stirred up about it. The fair seems to be going on well and the hall is engaged. The fair is to be held on Thursday next. I wish very much that you were to be here. I don't think I feel well enough to write any more. I have got a bad cold. I hardly know what I have been writing about so you will find some very disjointed sentences in it.
